Court? Camp?

Over the years as the Smith and Eslick families operated their unique motor court to accommodate automobile tourists, they changed the name of their business several times, calling it Eslick's Cabins, Eslick's Camp Cottages and Eslick's Cottage Court. When the Cottage Court building was recently placed on the prestigious Colorado State Register of Historic Properties, History Colorado chose to label it "Smith Eslick Cottage Camp". This was getting confusing! To make it a bit simpler, the Historical Society will continue to call the motor court building itself the Cottage Court, and it will be the centerpiece interactive museum in a unique historical greenspace which will be labeled the Smith Eslick Cottage Camp.

Architect's Rendering of Cottage Camp

Being placed on the State Historic Register of Historic Properties makes the Cottage Court one of only five buildings in the Grand Lake area to achieve historic designation. The others are the Kauffman House, the Grand Lake Lodge, the Grand Lake Community House, and Greenwood Lodge.
